HEADQUARTERS.
The Headquarters of the Fireside Schools is at 513 Mulberry street, Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Mary H. Flowers is the business manager, and all drafts and money orders should be made out in her name.

Miss Joanna P. Moore, the founder of the Fireside Schools and for more than twenty-five years the editor of HOPE, is honorary editor of that paper for life.

Miss Lorilla E. Bushnell is the editor of HOPE and superintendent of the Fireside Schools. Reports of the work should be addressed to her.
Miss Grace M. Eaton is the assistant editor and superintendent.
Miss Florence Burnett is conductor of the children's department.

HOPE.

HOPE is the official organ of the Fireside Schools. It is a monthly family magazine. Besides the Bible lessons for both adults and children it contains devotional, practical, missionary and educational articles, together with letters from workers.

The price of a single subscription to HOPE is fifty cents a year. In clubs of ten or more, sent to one address, it is twenty-five cents a year.

THE FIRESIDE SCHOOLS.
(Deut. 16:5-7; Tim. 2:15; Josh. 1:8.)

WHAT THEY ARE.
A Fireside School is a school at home, to which parents as teachers and children as pupils both belong, all studying together.

OBJECTS.
1. To help parents to make their own homes happy, intelligent and holy, according to God's plan.
2. To secure daily Bible study and prayer with all the family.
3. To supply homes with good reading.
4. To educate along secular and practical lines as well as religious.
5. To extend these blessings to our neighbors.
6. To promote temperance and purity.

TEMPERANCE.
The Fireside School has the following family temperance pledge:

"I promise in God's strength not to buy, drink, sell or give intoxicating liquors; also to abstain from the use of tobacco in every form, from gambling of all kinds, and from impure words and actions."

While pupils are not required to sign this pledge, it is hoped that many will take either the whole or part.

METHODS.

1. Christian parents sign the following pledge:
   (a) I promise that by the help of God I will pray with and for my children, teach them God's word daily, and expect their early conversion.
   (b) I will be a good pattern for my children in my daily life, especially in temper, conversation and dress.
   (c) I will recognize the fact that God expects me to care for and train my children for Him, in soul and mind as well as body.

2. Sons and daughters take this pledge:
   (a) I promise in God's strength lovingly to obey my parents, and join with them in prayer and study of the Bible and other good books. If I have a better education than my parents, I will take great pleasure in reading to them and teaching them in a respectful manner; also in a patient spirit to help the younger children.
   (b) I will try to be a pattern in neatness, industry and cheerfulness, and thus help to make home the happiest spot on earth, and stay at home as much as other duties allow.

(a) Since a meek and quiet spirit makes me more beautiful in God's sight than fashionable clothing, and costs no money, I will take time to enrich my heart and mind with the beauties of religion and other useful knowledge.

3. Daily Bible study and prayer are encouraged by the issuing of a paper called HOPE, which contains practical thoughts on Bible verses selected for daily reading. With the Bible, it is the daily study of Fireside School pupils.

4. The intellect is trained as well as the heart by the selection of good books arranged in a three years' course for home reading.

5. Parents who are not Christians are not asked to sign the Parents' Pledge or report to Headquarters, but it is expected that they will daily read HOPE and the Bible; also the other books chosen for home reading.

6. Any person who reads the daily lessons in the Bible and HOPE and the books of the selected course of reading is a member of the Fireside School.

7. Reports of work done should be sent by the pupils, once in six months, to the Headquarters of the Fireside Schools.
